1. A certain Lapinski, former lycee professor in Poland and reportedly a resident of Belgrade, visited Switzerland during the first week in September. He was en route to Belgium from Belgrade.
2. Late in September, it was reported that four men were to arrive in Brussels from Belgrade. They were charged with the recruitment for and liaison with the International Brigades. These men, it was reported were Lapinski, Kruzsheshchinski, Sucharev, and Bartosiewicz.
3. In Switzerland, Lapinski saw Brandel, Polish Military Attache, and Kopyto. He also intended to see a certain Mme. Gorska, whose real name is Eugenia Lozinska. Source does not know whether or not Lapinski and Gorska met. Lapinski, Gorska, and General Maslov belong to a group whose mission it is to facilitate the passage through Switzerland of International Brigade members who have been trained in Yugoslavia. Source claims that Maslov is head of the Soviet Military Mission in Warsaw.
4. Another Polish Communist, Stanislaw Larent, a resident of Paris, arrived in Geneva shortly after Lapinski. He, too, is reportedly involved in the International Brigades. In Geneva, he had a long conversation with the Swiss lawyer Vincent, one of the leaders in the Parti du Travail. Larent left Bern in the direction of Thun, in a car driven by Wolsky. Lapinski was also seen in Wolsky's company.
